DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Examiner took notice of the remarks and amendments made by applicant filed on 6/23/05.
2. A second non-final rejection is applied to the pending claims using newly cited reference.

Response to Amendment

3. This office action is in response to Amendment filed on 6/23/05. Claim 2-9, 12-13, 15, 17, 19, 21-22 and 24 amended.
4. Claims 1-24 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) The invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Walley et al, Pat. No. 6421283.

With regard to claim 1, Walley discloses a method of restoring defective memory cells, comprising: (a) checking all cells of a memory to determined whether the memory is defective at an operation start time (col. 4, line 13-20) (col. 4, line 30-21); (b) storing defect information, obtained as a result of the checking, in a memory controller when the checking of all of the cells of the memory is over (col. 4, line 20-22); and (c) replacing defective cells in the memory with spare memory provided in the memory controller when there is a request for access to the defective cells of the memory (col. 4, line 22-25).

With regard to claim 3, Walley discloses an apparatus for restoring defective memory cells, comprising: a memory scan controller (fig. 1, 4, 304), which scans a memory in response to a control signal to determine whether at least one cell of the memory is defective at an operation start time and generates defect information (col. 4, line 13-22); and a memory controller (fig. 4, 308, 309), which receives the defect information and converts a requested external address into an internal address for accessing the memory, and replaces said at least one defective cell in the memory with spare memory (fig. 4, 309) provided in said memory controller, wherein spare memory, rather than the defective cell, is accessed by a system controller when the requested external address corresponds to the defective cell (col. 4, line 25-31).

With regard to claim 4, Walley discloses wherein the memory scan controller generates a memory replacement signal when a number of said defective cells in the memory exceeds a predetermined number of data registers (col. 4, line 25-31).

With regard to claim 11, Walley discloses wherein checking is determined complete by scanning for deactivation of a scan signal (col. 4, line 32-35) (also with regard to claim 2 and 20).

6. Claim 5-10, 12-19, and 21-24 are objected as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art of record does not show the limitation of a memory controller having in combination with other features, a match detector which detects if an external address that matches the external address applied by the system controller exists among the external addresses stored in the first data registers; a controller which loads the external addresses of the at least one defective cell in the memory into the first data registers by referring to the defect information and replaces the at least one defective cell in the memory with the second data registers, depending on the detection result of the match detector, so that the second data registers can be accessed instead of the defective cell.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicants' disclosure. Shirley (6097644) and McClure (6731550) disclose a memory device having defective memory cells and replacement method thereof.

8. When responding to the office action, Applicants= are advised to provide the examiner with the line numbers and page numbers in the application and/or references cited to assist the examiner to locate the appropriate paragraphs.

9. A shortened statutory period for response to this action is set to expire 3 (three) months and 0 (zero) day from the date of this letter. Failure to respond within the period for response will cause the application to become abandoned (see MPEP 710.02 (b)).
